

Carl Forsythe is CEO of Globe Composite Solutions, Ltd., a privately-held manufacturer of composite components for industrial and military applications. He has held that position since acquiring the company in 2004. The company specializes in providing lightweight, cost-effective components for military and industrial applications.

Carl began his career at Ford Motor Company and shortly thereafter was involved in helping turn around banks and other financial institutions. He has held numerous executive positions at both private and public companies and has been involved with over $9 billion of mergers and acquisitions, the most recent was the sale of SharePlus Bank, a Texas-based commercial bank in October 2014. Mr. Forsythe is a business advisor and board member to iCracked, an international PDA lifecycle management company in Silicon Valley and Rebel Coast Winery, a fast-growing countercultural California-based wine company. He is also a member of Cornell University's Entrepreneurship Advisory Council and involved in numerous non-profit organizations.

Carl holds a BA degree in biochemistry from Columbia University and an MBA in finance from Cornell University. Carl and his wife, Sandy, reside on the south shore of Boston and have three grown children.
